1. Markierte Fische melden !

Increasingly fish species are becoming the subject of scientific studies.

Please help us find out more about what happens to tagged fish by reporting findings of tagged fish yourself or encouraging others to do so! This will benefit all people interested in fishes and consequently will benefit the fishes themselves.

We have made a website chapter available where you can seek information on this issue:

We have also created a form on our homepage to report findings of tagged fish in a very simple way.

Please support our project within the bounds of your possibility, also in the name of the organizations that are carrying out these studies.

2. Do you know „Happy Fish?“

Happy Fish stands for people, organizations and projects around the world fighting for migratory fishes and healthy rivers.

The organization “Wanderfische ohne Grenzen – NASF Germany e.V.” pursues the goal to connect the numerous initiatives for conservation of Atlantic Salmon and other migratory fish species in a better way, which means for example exchanging project experience or collecting and presenting data on a publicly accessible data-base. We do not encourage competition between the projects but want to promote existing and future projects and make them stronger.

Let us work together on the fruition of these goals. www.wanderfische.eu

On 21st of April 2018 the international World Fish Migration Day will take place.

This day of action for migratory fishes has been celebrated since 2014 to turn public attention to free flowing rivers needing protection so urgently. The restoration of river permeability for migratory fishes is still the crucial issue when it comes to human impacts on eco systems.

We are calling associations, societies, universities and interested citizens to participate in this day of action. Take part and register!
